Extra Matinee at VCKC

The sands of time are rapidly running out on the 1954 racing season at the Volusia County Kennel Club, but there will be plenty of action packed in the days remaining before the meet ends on Sept. 17.

In addition to the regular routine of nightly performances and Wednesday charity matinees, four special afternoon programs are listed on the schedule.

The first "extra" matinee will be held on Saturday, Sept. 4, leading off the Labor Day weekend. Another holiday matinee is slated on Labor Day, Monday Sept. 6, while other special daylight cards will be staged on Saturday, Sept. 11, and closing day, Friday, Sept. 17.

This busy agenda should give greyhound fans throughout Florida a chance to see their favorites run before the state's annual lull in racing which lasts several weeks following the close of the Volusia track's summer campaign.

Meanwhile, the VCKC has a new sensation following in the footsteps of Tumbling Pat, True Cam, Faye Womack, Sporty Harmony, Straight Jack and Trans Melba, who have all enjoyed spectacular but brief reigns over the many championship greyhounds in competition here.

It's Wayside Yukon Gal who has racked up four consecutive victories. She whipped the track's top hot box field twice as a long shot last week, crossing the finish line ahead of Tumbling Pat and Straight Jack in that order on both occasions.

"KNOCK ON WOOD"

Danny Kaye made this picture to his own measure, and it fits him like his skin. In this Technicolor release Kaye portrays a two-dummy ventriloquist whose complexes cross him up so drastically, whenever he falls in love, that his manager persuades him to consult a psychiatrist. The psychiatrist turns out to be a beautiful girl with a complex of her own which he takes care of in the rational way that sweethearts always have done these things, but the story gets snarled up with competing plotters, each band of them seeking to obtain high-explosive formulae which have been concealed in the ventriloquist's dummies, and who commit several murders which are charged to Kaye until the final seconds of running time. Neither prong of the story is treated earnestly, of course, and both yield large laugh harvests. The film is sheer delight. It contains something wonderful for everybody. The laughter it provokes is tonic to the body and soul, and since it raises the spirit of the benolder we would like everyone who can, to see it and rejoice.

"APACHE"

An Apache's last stand against the encroachment of the U. S. Army is spelled out in dramatic, mass-entertainment terms in "Apache."

The story depicts the unconquerable, one-man stand of Lancaster against the chastening influences of the white man. Embittered against them, his hatred flames even more in imprisonment. He breaks free from his captors only to be betrayed back into their hands by Indian rivals. He wins his freedom again and leads savage reprisals against his enemies. Thinking that Miss Peters was among those who betrayed him, Lancaster prepares a torturous death for her, but learns better and grows to love her. Finally in the climax Lancaster is tracked down and he prepares to die a warrior's death, meaning the taking of as many enemy heads as he possibly can. Others in the cast are John McIntire, a scout and Charles Buchinsky, an Indian aide.

"TANGANYIKA"

Combining the fury of man, beast and nature in a series of brushes with death and disaster, the story is set in the darkest jungles of East Africa and narrates the story of one man's battle against a mysterious terror that has torn Tanganyika territory apart. Van Heflin sets out with a safari to track down a power-crazed killer, a white fugitive from British justice who rules a jungle empire with his tribe of marauding Nukumbi warriors. In the safari are Howard Duff, an explorer, Ruth Roman, a sister of a murdered jungle scientist, and her orphaned niece and nephew, Gregory Marshall and Noreen Corcoran. Andre de Toth's direction stresses movement and conflict through a succession of sudden climaxes.

"PRINCESS OF THE NILE"

The Technicolor production, "Princess of the Nile," is a lavishly backgrounded vehicle to display the talents of Debra Paget as a promisingly exciting glamour queen. Michael Rennie and Jeffrey Hunter are co-starred with Miss Paget in the production—which tells the story of a Princess held captive in her palace by an Arabian conqueror, Rama Khan. Eventually she works out a daring plan of using a secret waterway that leaves from her private bathing pool extending to beneath the heart of the city, to swim to a gathering place. Michael Rennie, the brilliant English actor who has contributed many outstanding performances to films made here and abroad, again proves his flair for swash-buckling adventure roles. Athletic, popular Jeffrey Hunter provides a dashing performance as a Persian prince, handy with sabres and scimiters in exciting hand-to-hand duelling with Michael Rennie.

The Book Nook, a book shop and lending library at 161 S. Atlantic Ave., reviews the following book:

N.Y., N.Y. is considered by many a great new novel. It is written by Will Oursler who has done what few others have done to catch the glamour, the tremendous hurry and bustle and yet the inevitable loneliness of the big city—NEW YORK. In reading it one will be sure to remember such novels as Imperial City by Elmer Rice, Manhattan Transfer by John Dos Passos, East River by Sholem Ash, East Side West Side by Marcia Davenport and even New York, 22 by Ilka Chase and all of them have been good. Oursler's book may not be great literature but it is most readable. It is good reading which you will thoroughly enjoy. Here is the story of the unknown and the great, those of little prestige and the really powerful, the foolish and the brutal, a world of penthouses and a world of slums, the city's rich and poor, its intellectuals and its playboys as well as its priests and rabbis. We see the desire for fame and glory as also the search for escape.

Walter Minton suggested jokingly that it should have been titled "The Greatest City Ever Built" to follow the pattern of Oursler's non fiction books. But regardless of the title here is a book which will appeal for it is a real cross section of New York and it will take its place with the above mentioned memorable novels of that great city.

Stephen Clark says of it, "One of the few books of recent months that made me lose all track of time". Elsie Stokes says, "I believe people everywhere will enjoy this book, but New Yorkers will revel in it." Mabel Foster calls it the best novel since East of Eden. Mrs. C. Luce says of it, "Without a doubt one of the best American novels I have ever read." Harry Penso, before the book was published said of it, "A Sure Hit. This will definitely be a best seller." And sure enough it is on the best seller list and those who select their reading accordingly will be sure to read it but those who do not and yet seek a good readable book for this weather, take notice and be sure not to miss it.
